HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Sylvia Mendez was a young girl in 3rd grade when her parents sued their local school district for the desegregation of their schools. The court case Mendez v Westminster successfully desegregated schools in the state of California. This case served as an example to the future Supreme Court Case Brown v the Board of Education that resulted in the desegregation of all schools in the United States. Mendez is now a speaker and civil rights activist. She visits schools to speak to students and the community about equality and acceptance.
