HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

In 1988 a movie was released titled Stand and Deliver. This movie celebrated the achievements of teacher Jamie Escalante. Through his efforts 18 underachieving Latino high school students in an extremely poor east Los Angeles, California school were able to beat the odds and pass the Advanced Placement Calculus Exam, one of the hardest college credit courses to take. Their scores were invalidated by the College Board for fear of cheating. Through his belief in the students, they retook the exam and passed again. In recognition of his incredible achievement and devotion to students, he was awarded the United States Presidential Medal.
