Roberto Clemente was born in Puerto Rico and loved playing baseball. He was drafted to the Pittsburgh Pirates and had an outstanding career. He played in 15 All Star Games, reached the 3,000 hit milestone, and was also named Most Valuable Player. Off the field, Clemente also shined. He worked in the off season to organize charity drives and donated his own money and time. He told others that, "If you have a chance to help others, and you fail to do so, you're wasting your time on this Earth." Sadly he died in plane crash in 1972 while on his way to deliver supplies to earthquake victims in Nicaragua.
